

ORBI

and the Little Flame

On the Planet of Frost everything was icy and sad. No one sang, no one played.

In a cave a tiny flame named Ascuá trembled. "I'm so small... what use am I?" she sighed, and almost went out.

Orbi and Chispa landed on the snow in their tin rocket.

"Hello, Ascu," said Orbi. "Why are you so faint?" "Because I'm tiny. The cold is huge and I can't beat it."

"Are you sure?" smiled Orbi. "Come, let's try something."

They went out into the snow. A little bird was shivering, unable to fly. Ascuá came close... and the bird stopped trembling. "You see? A little warmth changes everything."

Ascuá glowed a bit brighter, surprised at herself.

They found a sad, lonely girl. Ascua sat beside her and gave her warmth.
The girl smiled and offered her hand.

"I'm not alone!" laughed the girl. "A little warmth changes everything."

Ascuá understood: she didn't need to be a giant bonfire. It was enough to come close to whoever was cold.

"Your light was never small," said Orbi. "It just didn't know how much good it could do."

Ascuá breathed and grew just enough: warm, golden, and cozy, without burning anyone.

Little by little, the Planet of Frost filled with shared fires, laughter, and warm hands.

Tonight, if you see someone with a cold heart, remember what Orbi whispers: a little warmth changes everything.

"a little warmth changes everything"
